Point Loma Pupil Wins

WINNERS ANNOUNCED IN PRIZE ESSAY CONTEST BY PUBLIC LIBRARY

The two winners in the San Diego public library contest will be awarded prizes this morning (Saturday) at the children's annex, by Mrs. Emma Irwin Cooley, who suggested the contest as a means of encouraging love of reading in San Diego children, and donated the prizes.

Miss Helen Dale, 3328 Rice street, 10-year-old student att he Point Loma school, won the prize of $10 offered for the best essay on "My Favorite Book," for children from 8 to 12 years old. Her choice was "Ivanhoe."

The prize of $20 awarded for the best article on "Why San Diego Should Have Branch Libraries," written by a San Diego boy or girl from 13 to 18 years old goes to Gene Handsaker, 3777 Herbert street, 15 years old and a sophomore in high school.

The judges were Mrs. Winifred Davidson, Dr. Gladys Morgan and W. L. Nida, all authors of children's books, and they found considerable difficulty in choosing from the number of excellent essays submitted. They did not learn the names of any of the contestants until the numbers were selected. There were 55 essays on "Why San Diego Should Have Branch Libraries," and 94 on "My Favorite Book."

Samuel Lipsett, son of Mrs. H. Lipsett, of Newport avenue, and a 15-year-old sophomore of the San Diego high school, was the author of the essay published in "The Beach News" March 7.

Dorothy Justins, a fourteen-year-old student in the eighth grade of the Ocean Beach public school, wrote the essay printed in "The Beach News" last week.

DANIEL A. DEACON DECLARED FEARLESS AND FAIR WITH FINE RECORD

Besides being an alert and honest advocate of suburban improvements in general and of the progress of the beach districts particularly, Daniel A. Deacon, a popular candidate for council, has won much worthy acclaim for his fearlessness and fairness as a board of health official.

Early this week Mr. Deacon appeared before the council and protested vigorously against the proposed selection of Mission bay as a garbage dump and positively asserted his belief in the acquisition of incinerators as the only healthful means for the disposal of city refuse.

In an official capacity, Mr. Deacon was alert in foreseeing the necessity of aeroplane regulation and helped most materially in drafting an ordinance recently presented to the city council which would make it necessary to have pilots examined and qualified before licensing them to fly. Great credit is also given to Mr. Deacon for sponsoring the resolution to abate the fish odor nuisance which recently had such a successful termination to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Councilmanic Candidate Deacon is a wide-awake business man, who has the endorsement of the plumbing trade, of which he is a prominent figure, and he has proved that he is ever active in safeguarding the interests of the community, both as a member of the board of health and as a public spirited citizen.

In his aspirations for the position of a city father, it has been deemed a good omen for Mr. Deacon that his initials spell "DAD," and hosts of his friends are rallying to his councilmanic standard for the primary election next Tuesday.

FRED HEILBRON IS SPLENDIDLY EQUIPPED FOR POSITION OF MAYOR

An appeal to voters generally to go to the polls next Tuesday and express their preference for candidates for the several offices, was voiced today by Councilman Fred A. Heilbron, candidate for mayor.

Mr. Heilbron established somewhat of a precedent by suggesting that "those voters who do not favor my candidacy should make it a point to vote for one of the other candidates fr mayor." This same thought is prominently featured in a campaign circular sent to every registered voter.

In a final statement issued from Heilbron-for-Mayor headquarters, the committee directing Mr. Heilbron's campaign summed up his qualifications for the office of mayor.

"Mr. Heilbron is splendidly equipped to administer the office of mayor, and his experience during six years of public service, and also during his long and successful business career, make him a particularly valuable asset to the community," the statement says.

"The qualities of leadership and foresight which Mr. Heilbron early displayed in the business field have been frequently exhibited during his six years as a member of the city council. The most recent outstanding instance of these characteristics was his staunch championship of the El Capitan project, on which issue he early took a definite stand and for which he fought without swerving. On that issue, admittedly one of the most important that has come before the people for many years, Fred Heilbron was 100 per cent right. It will be remembered the people voted the El Capitan bonds by a majority of more than 3 to 1.

"Water, harbor and civic improvement are questions with which Mr. Heilbron is intimately acquainted. Because of his broad knowledge of, and experience with important civic problems, he is splendidly equipped to hold the position of chief executive of San Diego."

CANDIDATE McMULLEN KNOWN AS "SQUARE DEALER" BY NAVY MEN

In a neatly arranged, eight-page, illustrated pamphlet, prepared by G. K. Spencer for the naval voter, voluntary testimonials are given regarding the records of a number of candidates for city offices at the forthcoming election and under the heading of S. P. McMullen for council appears the following:

"I know S. P. to be a 'square dealer.'"

"This exclamation from a naval man as this election journal was being compiled was more expressive, perhaps, than a number of more erudite or florid campaign utterances. It came from a naval man who was united with his family after a minor quarrel, through the good offices of S. P. McMullen, at the time chief of police of San Diego. Another officer would have made an arrest on the charges for which the man had been brought to his notice. McMullen gave happiness back to the man and his wife and children.

"The instance is typical of McMullen's feeling for the naval service.

"But it is not an isolated instance, for S. P. McMullen, who now asks you to cast your vote for him, has endeared himself to all naval men for many acts of kindness and decency through years.

MRS. KATHERINE TINGLEY TALKS AT SUNDAY SERVICE

Tomorrow afternoon Katherine Tingley will speak at the public temple services at the International Theosophical headquarters, Point Loma, in continuation of her series on "Theosophy and the Problems of Life." A symposium on "Man, Know Thyself," will be given by a group of the young men and women students of the Theosophical university.

LOUIS C. MAIRE LOYAL RESIDENT, BOOSTER FOR THE BEACHES

Louis C. Maire, who has announced himself for the council, is a progressive, clean business man who has been in the automobile business in San Diego for the past ten years.

He has prominently identified himself with the civic life of the community and has been a decided factor in the good road movement.

It was Maire working almost single handed, who secured the branch of the Motor Vehicle Department here, thereby permitting car owners to secure their licenses at home, instead of at Los Angeles.

The fact that Maire maintains a residence at La Jolla should be of interest to every resident of the different beaches, say his friends, as naturally being in close touch with local conditions gives him a sympathy and understanding with the needs of all the communities from Del Mar to Ocean Beach.

Those who know him best vouch for him as a man who will give to the city the best there is in him.

"If elected," says Maire, "I promise the people of Ocean Beach to help them in every way possible to become in truth the city of homes.

FOUR FAMOUS STARS FOR FILM PATRONS

With such movie favorites as Hoot Gibson, Jack Hoxie, Pola Negri and Harry Carey on the current bill at the Ocean Theater, Manager Ray Ericsson has certainly picked a quartet that's sure to please his hosts of patrons. The plays are first class, too. For instance, there's "Hit and Run" tonight, "The Phantom Horseman" on Sunday (tomorrow) night, "East of Suez" next Tuesday and Wednesday, and "Roaring Rails" next Friday and Saturday. They're all tip-top. Don't miss 'em!

EARL L. CHAPPELL PROVES POPULAR CANDIDATE FOR SCHOOL BOARD

With the announcement of the candidacy of Earl L. Chappell for a position on the board of education, hundreds upon hundreds of thoughtful voters are flocking to his standard and his hosts of friends predict that he will make the ticket at the primaries next Tuesday with a wide margin of votes. Earl or "Doc" Chappell, as he is more familiarly called, is a most genial, whole-souled fellow, fully qualified for a place on the school board, and "The Beach News" staff take great pleasure in endorsing his candidacy to the highest degree.

Mr. Chappell has been a resident and taxpayer of San Diego for the past fifteen years. He is the father of three children, all in the city schools. "Doc" is a university man, who has been interested for years in the activities of boy's organizations and this seems to mark him as one who would work for a progressive school program.

Economy is emphasized in his platform. Mr. Chappell states that the elimination of all unnecessary supervisors will save many thousands of dollars yearly, as the principals and assistants are thoroughly competent to do all necessary supervision. He also believes in a closer supervision of school construction, to prevent substitution of inferior material. In short, 40-year (and more) buildings for your 40-year bonds. Again, briefly, he advocates economy wherever possible without interference with efficient conduct of schools.

PERMIT FOR BLASTING

A permit was granted by the city council this week to L. O. Van Hook to do blasting for the planting of trees on his hillside property at Ocean Beach.

"ED" L. HEAD HOLDS HIGH REPUTATION FOR CIVIC ACTIVITY

Ed L. Head of East San Diego, is the only candidate from that section of our city for City Councilman; with a population of 20,000 east of Thirtieth street, it is only right that they should have representation upon the City Council.

Water is the great problem of San Diego, and Mr. Head is a practical water man. As a boy he went to work in the shops of the Spring Valley Water company, which supplies San Francisco with its water supply. He worked his way through all of the departments, until he became manager of the company. He remained with the company for 25 years. While living in San Francisco he was elected two terms as a member of the board of education, an honorary position.

He came to San Diego in 1907 and is in the real estate and insurance business in East San Diego, where he has large property interests. He is president of the Greater San Diego Club of East San Diego, the organization that put over the annexation of San Diego and East San Diego.

In 1924 Head was secretary of the "Swing for Congress" committee and took charge of the campaign, which returned Swing to congress by more than a two to one vote. When the citizens' committee for the El Capitan bonds was organized, Mr. Head was elected secretary of the committee and the campaign for carrying the bonds was under his direction. These bonds were voted by the people by a three to one vote.

Mr. Head's parents came to San Diego in 1888, and are among the city's pioneers. "Ed," as he is familiarly known, and his family have large interests in properties in San Diego and East San Diego. He is an active member of the chamber of commerce of this city, a leader in the San Diego Realty Board, a beach property owner and a staunch supporter of beach developments.

Ed Fletcher, District Attorney Chester C. Kempley, Rev. Howard Bard, Judge Claude Chambers, Charles Hardy, C. R. Hammond, Eugene Geissler and thousands of other citizens who believe that Bruschi is one of the best councilmen the city has ever had.

EDMUND C. MITCHELL POPULAR NAVY CANDIDATE FOR CITY COUNCIL

With the display line that "Edmund C. Mitchell is a sailor," a well known marine writer, G. K. Spencer, has published the following advisory announcement concerning the candidacy of Edmund C. Mitchell for the city council:

"Place an X opposite the name of candidate Mitchell when you vote for Councilmen in the coming elections. All hands, get this! Don't make a mistake!

"Mitchell is now a Chief Petty Officer still on active duty, but he is due to retire before he enters Council.

"This is an all hands job. This is the first time in the world it has been attempted by service men. No petty spites or other feelings must be permitted to keep a navy man out of Council.

"All army men are asked by their naval comrades to help the cause along."

"LOMA LORE"

By WINIFRED DAVIDSON

Point Loma, California

Book rights reserved.

There is some dispute, it seems, about whether or not Ballast Point was ever fortified by the Spanish. This point is easily cleared by reference to Hubert Howe Bancroft's History of California, Volume II, at page 11; also to Mr. Bancroft's "California Pastoral," page 296, where it says:

"In San Diego, according to the records, the priests blessed in November, 1796, the esplanade, powder magazine and flag. Early in 1795 Point Guijarros had been chosen for a fort of ten guns. This work was not finished until after 1800."

And everywhere that the affair of the Lelia Byrd is mentioned, there is an account of how the Yankee seamen, after having anchored at the usual place, the deep water in the cove between La Playa and Ballast Point, went ashore and inspected the fort, which consisted of a castillo and a battery of nine guns, the corporal in charge being one Jose Velasquez, and one of the soldiers on duty there being that Guillen who was the husband of the oldest lady that ever lived in California, and possibly in the world, Dona Eulalia Perez. Smythe's "History of San Diego," page 89, says:

"The Lelia Byrd dropped anchor in the bay on March 17 (1803) having sailed by the fort on Ballast Point without arousing any protest."

These references, I believe, are sufficient to call attention to the matter from the standpoint of the printed records. Because some of our old timers do not remember having "heard tell" of such a fortification is no reason for disbelief in the recorded statements that the fort, consisting of the castillo and earthworks, guns and men to man them, actually were there more than 120 years ago.

The San Diego Union of January 24, 1875, has this item:

"One of the old cannons was raised from the water at La Playa the other day. The discovery of this relic of old times suggests some reminiscences of the past. In the year 1825 most of the population of San Diego lived within the limits of the Presidio, whose ruins still remain on the hill back of Old Town. The people had their gardens outside in various directions. The "Castillo" (now known as Ballast Point) at the entrance to the harbor, usually had a guard of from 16 to 20 soldiers relieved from the Presidio. On January 17, 1840, all the materials of the 'Castillo' and the powder magazine were sold by the government to Don Juan Machado for $40. The point then mounted 30 piece of cannon; the powder magazine was built of stone. The quarters of the guard were of brick and were built close under the lofty hill from which Ballast Point juts out; the guard was not maintained after the year 1835. Two of the cannons of this fortification were with the Mexican forces at the battle of San Pascual, fought with the advance guard of the 'Army of the West' under General Kearney, December 6, 1846. (This battle was described in the report of Lieutenant W. H. Emory, U. S. Top. Engineers, the same who is now stationed in New Orleans with the rank of brigadier general.) Two other pieces of cannon, exactly alike, were brought up from the point to the plaza (Old Town) in 1847, for the protection of the people when the soldiers went to Los Angeles against General Jose Castro."

Dual Election Due In April

DIFFERENT HOURS FOR OPENING AND CLOSING COMPLICATE MATTERS

City Clerk Allen H. Wright has sent out instructions to election officers regarding the dual election to be held on Tuesday, April 7. With a city general election and a high school district election set for the same time and using the same polling places, but with different opening and closing hours, a situation has been created that will require the close attention of all serving as election officers as well as the especial interest of registered voters.

The general election polling places open at 6 a. m. and close at 7 p. m., while the state law requires that polls be open from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. in school elections. But as both the elections will be held in the same polling places it will be necessary for the election officers to open up at 6 a. m. and keep open until 8 p. m.

Instructions from City Clerk Wright state that no school election ballots should be issued before 8 o'clock, and no general election ballots given out after 7 p. m. A voter coming in before 8 o'clock in the morning of election day, April 7, may vote on the general ticket, but will have to come back after 8 o'clock to vote on the school bonds.

CECIL W. RANSOM OUTLINES BEST PLATFORM FROM HIS VIEWPOINT

Ably and loyally asserting his belief in a most pointedly convincing way that San Diego is to become "The New York of the West," Cecil W. Ransom, a councilmanic candidate with a large and loyal following, makes an all-inclusive platform embraced in one single purpose, namely, the common good of San Diego. Summed up, his most philosophic and rather prophetic published statement very graphically says:

"IT IS NOT ENOUGH that a man has lived here 50 or more years. IT IS NOT ENOUGH that he belongs to 40 or more secret orders. IT IS NOT ENOUGH that he grace a church pew every Sunday with his self-important presence, but it is ALL-IMPORTANT that he be ALIVE for the good of all broad minded, unprejudiced people, and that he have a vision that sees a not far distant horizon of smoke and industry, ships and airships, and in the background glorious parks, playgrounds, museums, theatres, colleges and churches, all for the glory of a great multitude in work, play and worship. These are the bright prospects almost unbelievable perhaps, but the inevitable sequence to forces now at work about us. Voters, let no half-hearted spirit block our development, let no votes be thrown away when your turn comes to play your part."

PRIMARY ELECTION SET FOR NEXT TUESDAY

For the benefit of voters, sample ballots have been mailed for the primary election to be held next Tuesday, March 24, and a complete alphabetical list of the candidates for the various offices was published in these columns last week. The three bonding propositions appear on a separate ballot. Vote for the library bonds.

Community Building

Follow Nature's Idea When Planting Trees

Take the roadside in a low and wet landscape, where you want to emphasize and still not hide the beauty of such a landscape. Nothing is more fitting than the red osier dogwood. You need not be afraid of overdoing the amount of planting in such a situation; it will always be in scale with the great open country surrounding it and will never dominate the landscape. There may be other places where an overdose of red osier dogwood would become grotesque and irritating, but not so in the open country.

Imagine a sloping hill, covered with roses, or if in a pine country, with junipers or harebells, or in the South with yuccas. Such a sight might be worth going many miles to see. The top of a bluff may be crowned with oak or maple, and in the pine country with white pine. If there be a rock cliff at a turn, such plants as native grape, bittersweet, red elderberry, yellow honeysuckle, junipers, harebells, blueberries, goat-beard spirea, etc., all in accordance with what will grow in that section of the country and make the most beautiful picture, should be planted. There are a great many other plants that will grow in such a situation, and enhance the barren cliff, as there are many other plants that will grow on the clay or gravelly bank, than those I have mentioned. The native vegetation is always the correct and sure guide to follow. Avoid stiff formality of planting.—Indianapolis Star.

Home Ownership One of Life's Big Steps

To own your own home seems a normal way of starting family life. The first question that presents itself in solving this problem is that of expense. The man or woman who has ready, idle cash need not worry, but the wage-earner, who can pay only a certain amount down and the rest on the installment basis, should do some careful planning.

Building and loan offerings solve the problem for many very satisfactorily. Learning to save consistently is another way of reaching the goal. It is generally considered good business to wait until we are able to pay one-fifth in cash for house and lot, then go ahead and borrow for the building.

Location is an important point to consider for those in moderate circumstances. Property in a central and improved section may cost a trifle more at the outset, but it also is likely to improve in value and be more salable should occasion arise to dispose of it. In growing cities, it is safe to risk a little in this way on the investment.

Value of Faith in Self

If cities of Alabama with all their resources and opportunities for development, were completely "sold" to their own people, they would soon feel much greater effects upon their progress and expansion. There is nothing like faith in oneself as an argument to others. Alabama cities have not been fully "sold" to their people as have Miami and some of the California cities. Many of the long residents of Birmingham, for example, do not even know what the community has in industrial achievements or opportunities. Half the people do not know what is manufactured here and what can be made, as is often demonstrated by new industries established by outsiders. And so with other Alabama cities.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Faith in the Home Town

In an editorial on "Believing" the Albany (Ala.) Herald says:

"It is believing that what people do counts for more than the natural advantages of a region or a community. It is believing that the contribution of every man is important as all face a common task, and that every one who 'lays down on the job' neutralizes in some material measure the results of what others do.

"Find a town whose people believe in it—believe that it is destined to grow and prosper—and you can no more keep it down than you can keep the sunshine from warming the earth."

Health in Cleanliness

Buildings with smoke-covered walls are taboo in Berlin. Regular scrubbing of building at monthly intervals is required by a new city ordinance. The measure primarily was passed to beautify the city, but advocates of the law say clean buildings also will be conducive to improved health conditions.

Ownership vs Rent

Only about 38 per cent of the American people own their homes. The remaining 62 per cent pay money to landlords. Rent money will, in a comparatively few years, pay for the house rented, but the landlord will still own the house.

Move in Right Direction

Nearly 700 American communities now maintain public play centers, and more than 12,000 men and women are employed as recreation directors.

LOVE TRIANGLE MAKES FATHER TIME GROGGY

Wife, Aged 99, Has Husband Arrested, Aided by Daughter, 66.

Des Moines.—A love triangle which makes Father Time look foolish was brought to light in the Municipal court in Des Moines the other day.

John Diggins, forty-one years old, a husband seemingly caught between the devil and the deep blue sea of too much romance, and two flappers whose respective ages range from cradle to the grave, played the principal roles.

Diggins was haled into court at the instance of his ninety-nine-year-old wife, Ellen Diggins, and his sixty-six-year-old daughter-in-law, Louise O'Brien, on a charge of threatening to commit a public offense after he is alleged to have deserted the two women for a twenty-two-year-old girl whose name was not revealed. He was held for trial and committed to jail in default of $300 bond, where he declares he will spend his time singing the "Too Many Mamma Blues."

Ninety-Nine and Bobbed.

Still vigorous despite her ninety-nine years, Mrs. Diggins violently shook her bobbed gray locks when asked if she still loved her errant husband. "I am through with him," she declared. "There are plenty more men in the world."

Diggins admitted at the city jail that he had been "driven to drinking canned heat" through the intensity of his emotional affairs, "as," he philosophized, "often happens in the case of men who include women in their business."

Haled Into Court.

He denied, however, the allegations made by his wife and daughter-in-law. He said that he had had nothing to do with other women, but that his wife had often "stepped out" on him. "They don't get too old to run around," he said.

A Lass of Ninety-Five.

There was some divergence in the stories told by Diggins and his wife regarding the cruise of the matrimonial bark since their marriage. She stated that they became wedded four years ago at the close of a whirlwind courtship when she was but ninety-five years old. This Diggins denies, declaring that the wedding occurred two years ago and that he was forced into the agreement by his wife's son and daughter-in-law. "I never loved her and now I am through with her for good," he declared.

Mrs. Diggins alleges that her husband left her about a month ago, taking a quantity of her clothes and other belongings which he gave to his youthful sweetheart.

Diggins said he left because he could no longer stand her abusive treatment of him. "Once she got mad and broke up a brand new cook stove and at another time she had me arrested for shooting firecrackers in my own house," he said.

Iron Splinter Drawn From Eye by Magnet

Berlin.—An iron splinter, one millimeter long, was recently removed from the eye of a locksmith with the aid of a gigantic magnet. The splinter had been in the patient's eye for three months before it could be located. Eleven sittings, in each of which the splinter, in a remote corner of the eye, was brought forward a little farther, were necessary to complete the operation.

Doctor Panderborn, the oculist in charge, was particularly concerned about removing the splinter, as the locksmith had lost one eye 30 years ago through a similar mishap. The experiment with the magnet was regarded as having little prospects of success, but it seemed to be the only alternative to complete blindness.

Cougar Kills Boy

Shipwrecked Men Saved From Death in Arctic

Nineteen shipwrecked men of the Canadian schooner Lady Kindersley, of the Hudson's Bay company, owe their lives to the skill of Capt. S. T. L. Whitlam, master of the United States ship Boxer, according to School Life, a periodical of the Interior department, bureau of education. The Boxer is a bureau of education supply schooner, plying between Seattle and Alaska, transporting teachers, physicians and nurses, and carrying provisions to the native schools of Alaska which are under the supervision of the bureau of education. It is a wooden boat with a carrying capacity of 500 tons.

For 27 days the Kindersley had been drifting at about 35 miles a day. Hopelessly imprisoned in the ice 40 miles off Point Barrow it is reported not a man would have been saved had the Boxer not gone to the rescue. Captain Whitlam battled with the Arctic ice for two weeks, but finally brought the Boxer within six miles of the Canadian vessel. Its crew then launched their boats and worked their way out to him.

Rats in an Organ

The famous organ in the Trocadero in Paris, said to be worth $125,000, is in danger. This magnificent instrument, the third finest in France, is suffering from old age. Five men could blow it at one time, but today it takes ten men to provide the necessary power. Many of the pipes are out of use because rats nest in them.

DANNY AND TRAINS

Danny was sitting upon the floor, building a huge house out of blocks when he heard a train whistle.

Building a Huge House.

With a jump he was up, the blocks were knocked over, and he rushed across the room, climbed right over his mother's lap and was looking out of the window.

Nothing in this world was so important to Danny as a train.

He had been on trains three times, too. Three different times he had taken trips with his mother and his father. And the last two times his little sister Elaine had gone along, too.

The first time Elaine had not gone because she had not yet arrived in the world.

But even though he had been on trains, he jumped up every time he heard the whistle in the distance. Then he could see from his window the smoke curling up from the engine, and he could hear the noise of the train.

He couldn't see the train from the house, but by going to the window he could see the smoke and he could hear it better, he felt quite sure, by being a little closer to it.

When he had traveled on trains he had gone with his daddy down to look at the big engine when the train was stopping any place for any length of time.

Sometimes it stopped for just a moment or two, and no one got out.

Some people complained of the train and said it made so many stops, but Danny couldn't understand such people.

They had talked to the engine driver. He was sitting up in the engine looking out of the funny little side window—or opening. Danny wasn't quite sure what it should be called, and when he said to the engine driver:

"Do you call that a window?" the engine driver had said:

"Call it anything you like, young fellow. You won't be hurting my feelings."

The engine driver had told him about the lights and the signals and what trains they would pass and how the locals stopped along the line to pick up the people who were only going short distances.

The engine driver had told him many things, and Danny felt as though, with a little more help, he could almost run the train himself.

In fact, the engine driver had said: "Why, you're learning in no time at all, all about it. I wouldn't be surprised to hear you were running a train before many years are past."

Danny thought it would be sooner than that.

Elaine hadn't taken the least interest in trains. She had sat inside in her mother's lap and hadn't wanted to go out at all.

But then she was only a little girl. But he loved Elaine. There was that time when his mother and daddy had gone to a party, and a lady had come in to stay with them. Elaine had not liked the strange lady, and had cried when she came into the nursery. So Danny had told the lady that he would look after Elaine, and he had promised her just loads and loads of candy and ice cream as soon as he got some money, and he had rocked her a little so she had fallen to sleep.

In Her Mother's Lap.

Still he had cried a little at seeing Elaine cry. He was very, very devoted to Elaine.

Only she didn't care much for trains. That, he couldn't quite understand.

He went back to his blocks when the train had gone by, and somehow he didn't build a house this time. He started in building a freight yard in which he put his trains. That was the best idea he had had yet.

The very, very best.

Loud Speaker and How It Operates

Unit and Horn Are Regarded as Essential Parts of Instrument.

By FRANK REICHMANN, B. S.

A raido loud speaker consists essentially of two parts, the "unit" and the "horn." The unit consists of an electro-magnet, with a vibrator arrangement, and a diaphragm. The electro-magnet, acting either through a vibrator or directly on the diaphragm, causes the diaphragm to vibrate. This motion causes the air to vibrate, and these impulses, when they strike the ear, create sound. The horn serves to amplify these air vibrations to create louder sounds.

Where Sound Originates.

In considering the construction of loud speakers it is well to deal first with the unit, as it is here that the sound originates. The loud speaker unit and the single headphone are fundamentally the same. The headphone is designed to give a very slight impulse to the diaphragm and the loud speaker unit is constructed to give as strong an impulse as possible and to handle very violent vibrations faithfully and accurately.

The sketch shows the arrangement of parts in an earphone or telephone type of loud speaker unit. "A" is the coil of wire connected by the phone cords to the output of the receiving set. "B" is the soft iron core around which the coils are wound. "C" is the soft iron diaphragm. "D" is the shell holding the various parts. "E" is the ear piece or cap of the unit. "F" is the permanent magnet.

Pulsating current from the receiving set in passing through the coil "A" sets up magnetism in core "B." Core "B" attracts the diaphragm "C" with more or less force, substantially in proportion to the current flowing through the coil. As this current varies in strength it causes the diaphragm to vibrate back and forth. These vibrations produce sound waves.

Unit Works Efficiently.

This type of unit works efficiently on moderate signals. On strong signals the diaphragm is apt to vibrate violently and strike the tip of the pole pieces, causing it to either "freeze" or to make an unpleasant rattling sound.

In the case of weak signals the greatest volume is derived when the space between the diaphragm and the pole piece tips is small. The reason for this is that the magnetism induced in the cores causes the diaphragm to vibrate, and the closer the distance between the poles of the magnets and the diaphragm the stronger this action becomes. A good many units using this general principle have some means of adjusting this air space, making it greater or less as the occasion demands. On weak signals this air gap can be made very small and the volume of the loud speaker increased. On powerful signals this gap can be increased to prevent the diaphragm from striking the magnets.—New York Herald-Tribune.

Rubber Panel Braces Can Be Easily Made

Handy angle "irons" or right angled brass may be made out of strips of discarded hard rubber panels. Cut the strip to the width and length desired by heating the hard rubber and the shears or knife to be used in boiling water. Cut the rubber and bend it across a right angled corner and leave it there to harden, which takes a few moments. Then drill the screw holes and use. It will need to be larger than if of brass to compensate for differences in mechanical strength.

Feed-Back Control Is Worth Consideration

Probably the simplest method for controlling regeneration in a radio frequency set employing transformers for interstage coupling is to use a potentiometer connected across the A battery with the lever connected to the grid return of the amplifier tubes in question.

Wives of the Past

Wives are not worse off today than they were 2,000 years ago. Two thousand years ago Rome led civilization, and in the words of Lecky, the scientist and historian, "The Roman family was constituted on the principle of the absolute authority of its head, who had a power of life and death over both his wife and his children, and who could repudiate the former at will." So the modern wife has something to be thankful for!

Music Score

The word score has several meanings in music. Full score has all the parts of a composition. Instrumental score, for instruments only. Short score, generally applied to a vocal score with a piano or organ accompaniment. Vocal score, where each voice has a line to itself. Piano score, where the orchestral or vocal parts are compressed into a piano part.

Water Organs

Nero is said to have possessed a great number of so-called water organs. The original term for this variety is organum hydraulicum.

Julia Pickett Candidate for School Board

FINE QUALIFICATIONS OF NOTED TRAVELER AND VOCATIONAL WORKER

Owing to the fact that Miss Julia Pickett is unable to appear to tell you in person on account of the recent double bereavement in her family during the past three weeks, her friends are calling attention to her exceptional qualifications as member of the Board of Education, for which position she is a candidate.

Miss Pickett is a graduate of Smith College. She taught for nine years in college faculties in the major subjects of history and English. Being a woman of clear vision, she saw that vocational training was one of the most advanced steps in education, so she took a post-graduate course at guidance. She has since then had experience in New York settlement work; was supervisor of vocational work in New York public schools; had charge of the central branch of the Y. W. C. A. employment agency; and was for three years supervisor of 1500 girls for the New York Telephone company—all questions of wages or working conditions being referred to her for recommendations.

A traveler—she has been around the world and has toured Europe—Miss Pickett since coming to San Diego has continued her vocational work and is now director of the Professional and Business Woman's Club. Between three and four hundred working girls come to her every month for help and advice. Her office hours are from 8 to 1 o'clock, and she could therefore arrange to give the necessary time to school work if the voters see fit to elect her to the position of member of the Board of Education.

Head the ticket with Julia Pickett for Board of Education.

FIRE PREVENTION A NECESSITY

It is better to have a community whose general tone is good from a fire prevention viewpoint than one with only a few fireproof monuments and great numbers of run-down fire hazards.

Only by unremitting agitation can our people be kept awake to the need of recognizing the principles of fire protection and only by organized effort can proper results be maintained.

Vote for the charter amendment at the general election April 7 for an increase in the pay of firemen and policemen.

ELECTION AND PLATFORM

Editor Beach News:—

What a goodly number of patriots are anxious to sacrifice themselves for the betterment of our city! It is rather amusing to note the same old stereotyped reforms they promise us.

First on the list is "reduction of taxes." That is always safe and sure with the voters, (but that is as far as it gets.

If, as some promise, the salaries of all city employes are to be increased, and more play grounds with their ball games, and other "educational facilities," supplied, how are the taxes to be reduced. The price of water has been doubled, perhaps that could be repeated.

With all of the different baits thrown out, surely most all of these candidates will be elected. Only one or two have touched upon a very imand that is the consolidation of the portant problem to reduce the taxes, city and county offices. That sounds like business, and is workable if desired.

One or two others advocate the ward system for the government of our city. In this we are far behind other cities, and the man who has the ability to put this through will earn the gratitude of the outlying districts of San Diego.

Show us, voters, who is able for this occasion. ZENAS.

O. B. LIBRARY

MARGARET RANKIN, Librarian

This topic is one of the most interesting and open subjects there are. Everybody knows something about branch libraries and I am very sure everybody will agree with me that San Diego DOES need branch libraries.

Branch libraries are one of the important institutions of any city of the population and size of San Diego because it is not possible for everybody to come to the main part of the city every time they want a book or want to look up a reference. For instance, if a student was told to find some information on a subject and he lived in University Heights, Logan Heights or Ocean Beach, it could not be expected of him to come to the main library to look for it. This information could probably not be obtained without branch libraries. Another thing that makes branch libraries necessary is because children from the ages of six to twelve couldn't come through the busy streets because of danger and it is very important that children of this age have other books than their school books because it enlarges their vocabulary and it teaches them to read their books and not memorize them. One of the school teachers said that the reading of the average child had increased fifty per cent since they had been able to have library books.

Service may be obtained quicker in a branch library, but branch libraries do not have lots of the good books. If you want the branch libraries of San Diego to have more good novels and more good reference books this is what you must do.

You go to the polls March 24, if you are a registered voter and vote "Yes" for the library bonds. This will help because the money now used for rent for buildings will be used for books.

If the "library bonds" carry Logan Heights, University Heights and Ocean Beach will receive branch libraries.

Remember and vote YES for the "Library Bonds," March 24—NEXT TUESDAY.

SERVICE BRANCH OF O. B. WOMEN'S CLUB BEGINS MOST HAPPILY

A very enjoyable afternoon was spent last Tuesday at the home of Mrs. J. L. Sweeney of 4917 Del Monte avenue, by the ladies of the Service Branch of the O. B. Women's Club. As chairman, Mrs. Sweeney called the meeting to order, and explained that the service branch was especially formed for the wives of service people or any women folks interested in service work, all of whom are cordially invited to join the new service branch. Regular meetings will be held on the third Tuesday of each month from 2:30 to 5 p. m., the next meeting being held at the home of Mrs. Charles H. Peltcher at 5068 Niagara avenue. As chairman of the study department, Mrs. M. Wynnes announced that their next meeting will be held on Thursday, March 26, in the Sutcliffe building on Abbott street. Mrs. Sweeney spoke very emphatically on the subject that members should first take up the study of "Home Industries" to the effect of patronizing all local business concerns, instead of sending out of town for anything that can be purchased here. Her remarks met with enthusiastic approval and were unanimously endorsed. Following the business meeting, Mrs. Sweeney, the hostess, assisted by her sister, Miss Simonson, served ice cream, cake and coffee and a happy social time was enjoyed. The following ladies were present at the initial meeting and became duly enrolled in the service branch: Mrs. C. H. Peltcher, Mrs. Madge Wynnes, Mrs. Charles Clayes, Mrs. C. A. Frank, Mrs. B. E. Norman Miss Emma Simonson, Mrs. E. B. Winans, Mrs. Kirk Smith and Mrs. J. L. Sweeney.

Mr. Heller is now building a second store adjoining this one, of same size and construction to be used as a meat market. Mr. Louis Mairot's two stores at the corner of Voltaire and Bacon streets, are also making good progress. Two other stores are to be built at the corner of Lotus and Abbott streets. 1. Water development to fullest extent, including securing supply from Colorado River; also conserving supply we now have on hand. The compromise plan now being worked out is a move in right direction.

2. A fair living wage for all city employes, which a great many are now not getting.

3. I would expect to consult the mayor on all questions pertaining to welfare of City, and delegate all power possible to him so that he could become leader of councilmanic body, which the people expect him to be.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

MERELY ROTATING

AMONG the restless men and women of this nervous age are those who take up their pursuits much in the manner of spinsters who are given to knitting and dreaming.

Often they start to crochet a muffler and end by playing whist.

They are good-hearted souls but moved mostly by impulse.

When the spirit stirs them they are off in a flash, but in a little while they toss aside their work, stare vacantly about, dab their noses with powder, light a cigarette or take a nap.

They are not in tune with the higher activities of the serious-minded.

Their happiness, if they have any at all, reposes on a precarious base. They nod pleasantly enough, smile benignly and tell the less fortunate what should be done to set mankind on a higher pedestal.

Yet these would-be instructors have no valid interest in vital things, no goal to which they are pressing their way, no thought beyond themselves. They are merely rotating in their own prescribed orbit.

Living in ease on money earned and saved by frugal ancestors, they find their greatest pleasure in feigning wisdom and handing out advice.

Their intentions are good from top to bottom. They are neither better nor worse than the common run of mortals, being generally amiable and kind, their counsel is usually disregarded.

Even the man that digs ditches stops his ears, for in his opinion he is judge and jury unto himself, and such a pleader in his court will not be tolerated.

To do the most good in this world, we should become one of the world by intimate association, speak its language, read the hearts of the lowly, understand their yearnings, win their affection and confidence.

Failure to do these things will put a brake on any ennobling purpose.

Lincoln knew the hearts of men because he was one of them.

He understood their unspoken language. They were always hungry for his words of wisdom, willing always to follow his leadership without question or quibble, for the reason that they were confident of his sincerity in their welfare and sure of his friendship.

A Large Order

"No one," said Fox, "could really be in love with Mrs. Siddons. Her scale, the huge structure of her genius, precluded any tender approach. In the court of love, as humanity knows it, her head would be sticking out through the roof. You might as well cherish a passion for Ursa Major or for the East India company."—From "The Right Place," by C. E. Montague.

WORK ON

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WORK on! Whatever your desire,
What peaks above you your intent,
Work on, and never dare to tire
Until you know accomplishment.
The humble task is yours today;
However humble, do it well:
To larger things it leads the way—
Perhaps tomorrow—who can tell?—
Work on!

Work on!—By working learn to do
The mighty task that lies ahead.
New duties are awaiting you—
Remember, and be comforted.
The river, harbor, then the seas,
So sail we on to greater things—
Yes, new responsibilities
Your toil today tomorrow brings.
Work on!

Work on!—The goal will yet be yours,
The post of honor, fortune, fame;
He wins the most who most endures.
Who onward ever upward came.
And dream not then of idleness,
For you must labor even then,
Your wealth, experience, success,
Must use to serve your fellow men—
Work on!

THE PRICE OF HATE

By LEROY WALLINGFORD

(© by Short Story Pub. Co.)

The price of a drop of water is sometimes high, though not because of nervousness over crop conditions in the Southwest or the fact that there are only a few million quarts of corn derivative left in the ice chest. The war has nothing to do with this case.

CHALMERS moved hurriedly out of the path of a wave that swept proudly over the damp mark made by its predecessor, and the waves gurgled pleasantly as if amused at the beachcomber's haste. The movement aroused Delcroix, and he followed the example of his partner by rolling over the hot sand as the tide crept stealthily in.

The silence was intense. It seemed to rise out of the panting ocean, a smothering influence that choked the weird notes of the wood pigeons and hushed the cicadas that sent shrill, needle-like noises from the green masses over which the lawyer vines crept like a living net.

"Go on," murmured Delcroix; "your pauses would lead anyone to think you were making up the yarn as you went along." He spoke irritably, as if the silence that flung itself upon them each time that Chalmers stopped talking had upset his nerves.

The sun-tanned features of his companion wrinkled into a cynical sneer.

"Perhaps I am making it up," he said, quietly. "Sometimes—sometimes when I tell it to anyone like I am telling it to you, I wonder if I didn't read it in a book years ago, and just fooled myself into the belief that it happened to me."

He paused for an instant and moistened his dry lips.

"That's a lie!" he cried sharply, turning suddenly upon his companion as if he would destroy the doubt occasioned by his last remark. "This is the truth! I never think that I read it, not this yarn, Delcroix! I know that—that this thing—Where did I stop? Oh, I remember! Well, our three Kling divers muzzled the silt near the Horse Shoe Shoal for weeks, and we piled black-lip shell into the hold by the ton. God, it was rich! We'd sit of a night on the deck of that old lugger while the smell of half the world's nations drifted over the tropic seas, and we'd dream of what we'd do with out profits. He'd do the picturing—that's why I hated him so much afterwards.

"I remember those nights. The darkness just sneaked down from Asia like a drifting blanket, and the yell of Javanese from the prahu fleet would sting the silence like a whip. Ever listen to the cities calling in the night, Delcroix? Clink of glasses, kid's prattle, sound of shoes on the pavement, and the laugh of women—it just gets into your breast like an iron hand and twists your heart strings till you choke for breath."

A big wave slipped forward quietly and slopped over the bare feet of the two beachcombers, and Delcroix cursed as they rolled out of its path.

"It was on one blazing hot day in September that he cut loose," continued Chalmers. "I pulled across to a whaleboat on the other side of the reef, and coming back I was just dreaming of wheat fields and orange groves two thousand miles away as I stuck the oars into that sea of melted glass. Then I sort of woke up and looked around. The old lugger was squelching down the seas, and that swine was rushing round helping the Klings to spread more cloth.

"Do you know how those little puffs of air race round in the tropics? 'God's breaths' the Orang Lauts call 'em. They hit a boat every five minutes and leave a stillness after them that gives you a cold shiver. Well, the lugger was getting those little whiffs now and then, so I put after her. I can feel that pull now. Every ray of the yellow sun went through my back like a poisoned arrow, and the reflection on the oily waters blinded me. He could have potted me with a gun at times when I gained on the boat, but he didn't. He just raced round spreading more cloth, and just when I thought there was a chance of getting aboard, one of those little puffs would get tangled up in the sails, and the old lugger would roll away like a drunken thing.

"I don't know how far I followed him. After a time I couldn't see, but I kept on pulling. I was blinded with the glare from that red-painted ocean, and every time I dipped the oars I screamed in agony. Once I was quite near. I could hear him yelling at the crew, then he seemed to understand from my actions that I couldn't see, and he stopped talking, and all I could hear was the creaking of the ropes as the old tub got the wind again.

"I was picked up by a trepang-laden proa bound for Macassar, and that kept me three months off his trail. It was three months of hell for me. Then I started out to beat the coast from Thursday Island to Cape Otway in search of him, and every day made me more eager.

"I thought I saw him a score of times. The swine's face sprang from my brain onto the heads of people that didn't resemble him in the slightest. Ever have that happen to you? At Keppel Bay I clutched a pearling skipper who had a beard like his, and I got a knife in the ribs for my foolishness. I met him a thousand times a day—it's truth, Delcroix. In the night I'd spring up thinking he was in the room, and then I would go blind like I did on the day he sailed away and left me at the Horse Shoe Shoal.

"Something seemed to have pulled me to Bluemud Bay. It was the last spot I expected to find him, and when the old lugger caught my eye I couldn't believe that he was still on her. When McKay of the coal hulk told me that he still ran her, I nearly went crazy, and the hours between then and sunset were years of misery.

"I pulled over after sundown, and it was dark when I came under the bows. Things seemed to be coming my way at last. When I started to climb the chains every smell that drifted over Horse Shoe Shoal came to me again, and my brain started to dig out all the pretty little pictures that he used to paint about the times we would have in Lonsdale street. I felt good, Delcroix.

"I got a shock when I touched the deck. A woman rose out of the shadow and caught me by the arm. 'Doctor?' she asked, and before I could answer she was leading me down the stairs to the cabin, the stairs that I had been up and down ten thousand times before. I knew then that it was he. She took me up to the bunk, and there he was tossing in a fever and cursing in all the dialects of Polynesia.

"The doctor stunt suited me when I saw the condition he was in. The woman hadn't slept for three nights, so I sent her away, and sat down to watch him. Somebody has said that the world is only a kraal, and it seemed like it to me just then. Sometimes as I watched him I forgot all about the hunt of the previous ten months and thought we were back piling that black-lip shell into the lugger at the reef.

"About midnight he became conscious, and then he made a motion for water. It was in a bottle on the table, and it was as warm as Torres Straits on a midsummer day. Would you have given him water, Delcroix? You wouldn't! Well, I didn't like to give it to him, so I offered to sell it to him. He didn't recognize me till I told him the price. 'Ten drops of water in exchange for a pearl,' I said, and then he began to understand that Fate had run him up against something."

Delcroix laughed grimly. "A stiff price," he murmured.

"Stiff!" shrieked Chalmers. "Was it stiff? You have no imagination. Why it was a bargain sale price after what I had suffered!

"He refused to buy for two hours, and then his thirst got the better of him. I didn't think he had the grit that he showed then. His lips were black, and his curses just ran into a long gurgle because his tongue couldn't hack them into word lengths. Then I put up the price. 'Five drops for a pearl,' I said, and he nodded his head toward a black box in the corner of the cabin, and let me see that the key was under his pillow.

"There were 57 beauties in the little bag, and I laid them out near the water bottle so that he could see that I was acting honest. I measured out five drops of the warm liquid and gave it to him, then I put one of the pearls back into the bag and put the bag into my pocket. He bought again in five minutes, then he bought ten drops in one lot, and then fifteen, and then twenty. Ever hear of water going at that price? But I was honest. I only took the price I had fixed, and when there was an extra large pearl I gave him good measure to make up for it.

"I cautioned him against extravagance when he bought a spoonful of the stuff in one lot, and I thought he would expire in an apoplectic fit. He spluttered that much that he lost half of his purchase, and he had to repeat the order. No goldfield shanty ever did a trade like mine that night in Bluemud bay. D'ye think I was getting a good return for that pull after the lugger?

"He swilled the lot away inside three hours, and when he saw the last pearl go he lost consciousness again and started to babble about the profits that he made on the trip when I had the half share. I left him then. I tip-toed quietly up the stairs and slipped down the chains into the boat. Half-way across the bay I ran into a dingy carrying the doctor from the mission schooner, and I was so darned pleased over the night's business that I directed him to the lugger which his two Kanaka boys had been trying to find for the previous three hours. Then people tell you there is no such thing as luck."

Delcroix buried his legs in the warm sand and sat looking out to sea. "What did you do with the loot?" he asked, after a long pause.

"The loot?" cried Chalmers. "I went down to Peterson's—Oh, what's the use of telling now. The loot? D—n it, it was mine! I couldn't hold it, though. What did I do with it? You're an idiot, Delcroix. You're an infernal idiot!" He stood up and brushed the sand from his tattered trousers, then turned and swung down the trail towards the cluster of huts near which the beche-de-mer fleet lay at anchor.

Wrong Ideas About Dogs

Many people pamper their dogs against colds. If a dog has not had distemper care in this respect is advisable, but ordinarily dogs are not affected by the germs of colds. Another curious belief is that a dog's ailments can be contracted by human beings. This is true only in the case of certain skin troubles. Even more curious is the belief that in what are known as the "dog days"—the first fortnight in August—a dog is liable to go mad. There is no cause for such a superstition.

Say "Otiose" Not "Lazy"

Are cross-word puzzles helpful? The other day we were doing one when we had to find a six-letter synonym for "lazy." As a starter we already had "o" and from somewhere within us came the whisper "otiose." We hurried to the dictionary and verified its meaning. "Otiose" has now become fixed in our vocabulary. Not only that, but we have directed the attention of friend wife to the word, with the hope that when next she feels like characterizing us with the shorter and uglier term, she will substitute "otiose." It is much less jarring.—Boston Transcript.

Your Last Name

IS IT THOREAU?

THOREAU is said to be equivalent to the more usual name Bull, for Thoreau is the old French form of toreau, or taureau, meaning bull. These names may originally have been taken as nicknames describing physical or mental characteristics, or from shop signs, which some authorities think much more likely.

The name Thoreau is known here chiefly as the name of Henry Thoreau, who married the daughter of a New England clergyman and was the son of John Thoreau of the Isle of Jersey, who married a Scottish woman named Burns in Boston. John was son of Phillippe Thoreau and Marie Gallais, of pure French blood, who settled at St. Hillier in Jersey.

Henry Thoreau thus had a New England mother, a Scotch grandmother with a mixture of Jersey and French blood besides. The family in this country was never wealthy, but always highly respected and above the average in mental endowments.

STEWART—This name, says one authority on name origins, has had its ups and downs. It is derived from two words, sty and ward, and in its earliest form literally means keeper of the sty. Eventually the steward or Stewart was an official attached to the household of a prince or nobleman, and it is in this capacity that the royal Stewart family derived the name.

There was a Norman baron Alan whose eldest son, William, became the progenitor of the earls of Arundel in England and whose younger sons, Walter and Simon, went to Scotland. Walter became high steward to King David I of Scotland, and when one of his successors, also named Walter the Steward, married Marjorie Bruce in 1315, the family became royal. Many of the Stewarts and Stuarts of the present time claim, with good enough grounds, to be descendants of this union.

FOOD FOR INVALIDS

GREAT care should be used in the kind of food given the sick. One who has been living on a liquid diet for some time should be given semi-solid foods very gradually. The first meat should be in the form of scraped beef, panada of chicken or finely minced lamb. Poached eggs, baked potatoes and baked apples will add variety.

Meat Pate.

Scrape a portion of round beef with the sharp edge of a tin spoon. This removes the edible fiber, leaving the tough connecting tissue. Press into small cakes and broil after seasoning a bit with salt. Serve on buttered toast, cut very thin and shaped in rounds.

Chicken Panada.

Remove the skin and all fat from the breast of a chicken. Place in a saucepan with just enough water to cover and simmer slowly for two hours or until the meat is tender. Drain from the broth, cut it into small pieces, pound in a mortar and put through a sieve. Add broth to thin, season, adding cream if allowed, bring to the boiling point and serve in a pretty bowl with thin pieces of toast cut into fancy shapes. Half of a large chicken breast will make sufficient panada.

Small quantities of food, served in the prettiest dishes one has, and garnished with care, make food much more important and worth while to an invalid. Usually there is no desire for food in a convalescent, and it must be served often and in small quantities. The entire responsibility for the return to health usually rests on the food, so it is a most important factor.

A turkey is not always available for the small purse, so a duck, a small goose or any of the plentiful meats in the market will make a fine substitute.

Mr. Lysander John Appleton
Mrs. Lysander John Appleton
Miss Daysey Mayme Appleton
Master Chauncey Devere Appleton

IT IS Mrs. Lysander John Appleton's opinion that a literal interpretation of that old command, "Put your best foot forward," means to hang all of her and Daysey Mayme's ruffled, tucked and lace-trimmed underwear in the front yard on washday, and the patched and tattered arms and legs belonging to her husband and son in the rear.

—x—

Unless something happens to remove Chauncey Devere Appleton from the atmosphere in which he is living, he will grow up as suspicious of what the women call love as a rat is of cheese.

—x—

The greatest sorrow of Daysey Mayme's life is that she is Misunderstood by her own family. Many an evening she finds herself so lonesome when with them, that she walks out to the gate alone and looks up at the stars, and when she can't get out, she will stand at a window and look wistfully into the dark. Daysey Mayme frequently looks wistfully into the dark, having learned from the books that this is a symptom of Soulfulness. So one night she soaked her pillow with tears in her yearning for the Unattainable, and her father, who saw the wet pillow next morning, made her take a dose of medicine for night sweats.

ENSEMBLE SUITS FOR SPRING; TWO-PIECE DRESSES POPULAR

THE ensemble suit made its entry last fall. It came, it saw, it conquered, it remained—and now it is triumphing in spring fashions from one ocean to another and developed in no end of ways. The displays include ensembles in plain, tailored types, in sports models, and formal types, and all of these are varied to suit the years of their wearers.

For younger women printed silks in figured and striped patterns, made up with plain woolen materials, are used for suits in which the coat is of the wool fabric and the dress of silk. The lining of the coat matches the dress and very often the coat material is used in bandings on the dress. But sometimes a one-piece dress is made by combining the coat material with figured or striped silk. The one-piece dress has no monopoly of ensemble suits, for two-piece frocks, with skirt and overblouse like that shown in the picture, do their bit toward lending the mode diversity. In this frock the three-quarter length coat is lined with a printed silk and this same silk makes the smart overblouse, seen at the right of the picture, over a plain skirt. In ensemble suits of printed silks for younger women the new high shades in figured silks make wonderful combinations with plain wool materials, and the model pictured shows the coat faced back as well as lined with silk like that in the blouse.

Another variation of the blouse and skirt idea for an ensemble shows a very long blouse of silk crepe worn over a straight skirt of charmeen which it nearly covers. The coat is of charmeen with silk crepe collar.

Kasha cloth, especially in the natural shades, appears in more dignified versions of the ensemble suit, sometimes making a long coat to be worn over a bengaline or crepe frock. This is a favorite combination for older women and furnishes a practical coat for wear with other frocks. In the dressier types of the ensemble the frocks may be made of two colors in crepe de chine or two shades of one color. They are usually decorated with embroidery of silk and fine metallic threads that joins the contrasting colors or shades.

"Sing a song of sixpence," while a pocketful of gold is what we would all like to have, now that new spring finery is on display from one ocean to the other. But a review of this new apparel makes one thing apparent—never would the sixpence pay for so much, so far as good style is concerned, as it will right now. It is amazing how good-looking the new inexpensive frocks and coats contrive to be, and it is good business to take care of one's needs as early as possible, for it nearly always happens that the designers turn out their best work first.

It is important to begin with street clothes when an outfit is to be acquired, and to buy as good quality as can be afforded. Street clothes must stand wear and in them we make a first impression on the people we meet in the everyday affairs of life. The coat and the tailored hat and dress, the walking shoes and street gloves deserve all the consideration that can be given them.

Starting out with the coat, the new season has brought in a variety of handsome models for general wear. Straight lines and rather light shades and neutral colors are emphasized in them, but there is a good representation of the darker browns along with many light brown, beige, tan, dark blue, medium green and wood colors. The double-breast front is graceful and a great favorite. Both the set-in and modified raglan sleeves are used and an absence of trimming is a mark of distinction; for it is to be kept in mind that fashion sponsors simplicity in utility coats. Some fur appears, but there is a fad for placing it at the bottom of the coat, while collars and cuffs are without it. The coat pictured here, almost without adornment, may be accepted as a measure of good style.

In cloths there is considerable variety, including home spuns, twills, suede finish and kasha-like materials. Special weaves are introduced and for dressy coats there are silks and satins—in black with colored lining often in a wool material.

KITCHEN BUILT TO MEASURE IN FARM HOME

Farm Home in State of Washington—Large Work Porch and Pump Near House.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A built-to-measure kitchen in a farm home in the state of Washington has attracted a good deal of attention, because the home management specialist of the extension service aided in drawing up the plans. The idea was not to have a "model" kitchen, but a convenient home for the purpose intended.

Arranged to Save Steps.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Morton are pioneering on a new berry ranch. In planning their home as a demonstration to show that an elaborate structure is not necessary to make a comfortable farmhouse, the state specialist proved that a plain building with no interior finish except the sheathing can be conveniently arranged to save steps for the farm woman and to lighten the burdens of housekeeping. Three features were emphasized in the Morton home. One is the well-arranged kitchen with all the working surfaces built according to the height of the woman who is to use them. Another is the well, close to the house, and the hand force pump which lifts water to a tank in the garret and provides running water for the kitchen and bathroom. The third feature is the large work porch and the hall opening from it and connecting with the bathroom, living room and bedroom. The laundry tubs, with the hot and cold running water, are placed on the porch. It is also large enough for the separator and churn and similar equipment. The hall opening from the work porch gives the farmer access to the bathroom without having to go through the kitchen.

Conveniences in Every Home.

It is the aim of the state home management specialist, according to a report received by the United States Department of Agriculture, to urge that one of these conveniences be put in every farm home. The Morton house is one of several built-to-measure houses in the Yelm district of Thurston county. The district was selected for the demonstration of the feasibility of made-to-measure, conveniently planned homes because the settlers now going in there represent the average, having limited financial means and needing a maximum of comfort and convenience for a minimum of expense.

HONEY RECIPES ARE OF UNUSUAL NATURE

Lends Itself Very Nicely as Sugar Substitute.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Not only is the honey useful to eat strained, in the comb, or candied, but it lends itself to use in place of sugar in cookery, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

Baked fruit, such as whole apples with the cores removed; baked whole peaches or cooked dried fruit are very good sweetened with honey in place of sugar. Preserves or marmalades may also be made with honey. Apple or pear preserves made by the following recipe are very good:

Honey Preserves.

|---|---|
| 2 quarts apples or pears cut into pieces | 1 teaspoonful cinnamon2 cupfuls honey1 cupful vinegar |

Heat the honey, vinegar and cinnamon together and cook the pieces of fruit a few at a time in the sirup until they become transparent. Pour over all the sirup which remains after all the fruit is cooked.

Honey may also be used in cake making or for sweetening ice cream, custards or puddings, and in cake and cookie making. In substituting honey for sugar you will get good results if you will follow your old recipes, substituting a cupful of honey for a cupful of sugar and using one-fourth less of whatever liquid the recipe requires.

Soft Honey Custard.

|---|---|
| 2 cupfuls milk | 1-3 cupful honey |

RECLAIM WASHSTAND FOR KITCHEN USE

Dicarded Piece of Furniture Made Useful.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Every so often one discovers that some article of furniture which served a valuable purpose in a preceding decade has outlived its usefulness, or given way to some modern household equipment evolved with modern ways of doing household tasks. One of the furnishings which long since disappeared from the city house and which is rapidly being banished to the attic in the rural home is the washstand that used to be seen in every bedroom.

Several of these bygone pieces of furniture have been reclaimed for useful purposes by farm housewives in Virginia where a series of kitchen contests has stimulated much ingenuity in making improvements at small cost. In preparation for these contests the state and county home demonstration agents usually visited each rural home to talk over the possibilities for making the kitchen a more convenient room in which to work. It was frequently found necessary to look about and see what was on hand that could be made to serve a useful purpose without buying anything new. Discarded washstands, under their suggestion, were brought downstairs and transformed into convenient buffets, desks, and wheel trays. By the elimination of sides, drawers, and closet, leaving only the framework, the washstands were easily disguised. In most cases the varnish or paint was taken off, the surfaces rubbed over with sandpaper, and several coats of white paint applied, the final finish being enamel. This work was generally done by the farm woman herself. With the addition of casters the evolution of the washstand was complete, and proved very satisfactory. The picture shown was taken by the United States Department of Agriculture, with which the state extension forces cooperate in the work among rural housekeepery.

Wanted—A Grandmother

Maizie Ellen played with some children next door and they were always talking about their grandmother doing this or that for them. Maizie Ellen had no grandmother, and it worried her because she could not refer to one. She asked her mother, but, of course, mother could not provide a grandmother for her. Finally she approached her Aunt Kate, whom she was visiting one day: "Aunt Kate, I want a grandma. You got gray hair and look just like a grandma. I believe I'll just call you grandma. I want one. All the other little girls have one."

Get rid of constipation by internal cleanliness

HEADACHES, biliousness, sleepless nights, heaviness, are Nature's warning that intestinal poisons are flooding your system. If this is allowed to continue, you may become a victim of serious organic disease.

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favour Lubrication

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

Don't forget that Fred Heilbron for years advocated the El Capitan project. The bonds for this vital water development were voted by more than 3 to 1.

If the people had followed the advice of those who opposed El Capitan, San Diego would still be fighting over the place where a dam should be built, and it might have been years before a water settlement was reached.

Fred Heilbron favors submission of the water settlement plan to the voters at the earliest possible moment, but not until the people know exactly what they are asked to approve. THE MAYOR, CITY MANAGER AND MEMBERS OF THE COUNCIL HAVE PUBLICLY ADMITTED THEY DO NOT KNOW ALL OF THE FACTS.

DEEPLY BEREAVED SCHOOL BOARD CANDIDATE HELPED BY FRIENDS

Miss Julia Pickett, candidate to fill the position left vacant by the retirement of Mrs. Connell on the Board of Education, has certainly been most unfortunate in her opportunity to campaign for this honored position.

Shortly after filing her petition, Miss Pickett's sister was taken seriously ill with pneumonia at her home in La Jolla, and Miss Pickett dropped everything and was with her sister night and day until the sister died. As soon as could be arranged after the funeral Miss Pickett again took up her duties and her campaign, but after four days of activity, her mother, with whom she lived on Third street, San Diego, was also stricken with pneumonia. Again every other concern was dropped in order that she might devote her whole time to nursing her mother, who, however, passed away on March 12th.

This double affliction of course makes it impossible for Miss Pickett to take an active part at present in her campaign; but her many friends and acquaintances are coming to her rescue and knowing her exceptional qualifications for the position which she seeks, are endeavoring to carry her campaign to a successful issue.

Contrary to all rumors, Miss Pickett has not withdrawn. She comes from old New England fighting stock, who never say quit.

AN HOUR WITH THE OCEAN BREEZE

By G. Hamilton Hammon

Strolling one day by the seaside,
And watching some dear dogs at play,
I fain would imbibe inspiration,
But little would come just my way.
Well, I thought—what a wonderful treat—this!
A walk on this fine sandy beach.
Here sometime may beautiful race-horses
Enjoy to the full their wild leaps.
The sea gives me joy as I watch it,
And play with a boy and his dog;
We throw sticks away to the breakers;
But now as I sit on this log
My mind wanders back to my boyhood,
To the River Shoalhaven far away,
In Australia—I see it again here,
Twixt two beaches—the mouth of the bay.
O, I fished there in those days—or thought so,
But in truth, I remember no hooking
And my pals were somehow not my sort,
For I smoked not, and much preferred cooking.
As a beautiful kindly young collie
Comes up to me here as I write,
I fondle and talk to him happily,
Then he's off for some birds in full flight.
And off I must go too, and take part
In some deep, deep discussion with friends;
I've enjoyed quite an hour, so refreshing,
And I like Ocean Beach, end to end.
